This article presents two and three-player breakdown drills for teaching Rick Torbett's Read and React offense. To run the offense effectively, players must be conditioned to instantly read the defense and react correctly. These drills help make their actions more automatic. Their reactions must become so ingrained that they become "habits" - something they automatically do without thinking about it.

Read and React Offense Breakdown Drills, Coach's Clipboard

You can use the Read and React with any type of team. Torbett's offense can be run out of 3-out, 4-out, or 5-out alignments. This makes it easy to run the same offense but adapt it to your personnel year to year. This continuity is a huge advantage over teams who have to overhaul their offense every time their personnel changes.

READ & REACT OFFENSE DRILLS by Rick Torbett

The Read and React offense is keyed off of what the ball handler does. The ball handler is clearly the initiator and the rest of the players are reactors. The players without the ball are not just free to react as in a motion offense. They have a single trained response for each specific action of the ball handler.
